

- While declaring the plan, the Secretary of State for Indian Affairs made it clear that the British Government wanted to listen to the ideas of all major Indian communities.

Simla Conference

- To discuss these proposals Wavell called for a conference at Shimla on 25th June, 1945. Leaders of both the Congress and the Muslim League attended the conference, which is known as the Simla Conference.
- However, differences arose between the leadership of the two parties on the issue of representation of the Muslim community.

All this resulted in a deadlock. Finally, Wavell announced the failure of his efforts on 14th July, 1945.

The Cabinet Mission Plan (1946)

- The Attlee Government announced in February 1946, the decision to send a high-powered mission of three British Cabinet members : Pethick Lawrence–Stafford Cripps and AV Alexander to India to find out ways and means for a negotiated peaceful transfer of power of India.
- The mission rejected the Muslim League's demand for Pakistan. The mission proposed a Two Tier Federal Plan, which was initially accepted by both the Congress and Muslim League. The Muslim League eventually decided to keep away.

Reaction to the Plan

- The Muslim League joined the cabinet but decided to boycott the Constituent Assembly which started its work of framing the Constitution on December, 1946.
- The Muslim League on 6th June and the Congress on 24th June, 1946 accepted the long-term plan, but forward by the Cabinet Mission.
- July 1946, elections were held in provincial assemblies for the Constituent Assembly. The Congress got 209 of the total 273 seats.
- 29th July, 1946, the league withdrew its acceptance of the long-term in a reaction against Nehru's statement and gave a call for 'direct action' from 16th August, 1946 to achieve Pakistan.

Interim Government (2nd September, 1946)

- Lord Wavell invited Jawaharlal Nehru, the leader of the largest party in India to form an Interim Government which was sworn-in on 2nd September, 1946.
- It was composed of 12 members (including 3 Muslims) nominated by the Congress, Jawaharlal Nehru was its Vice-President. It was for the first time since the coming of the British that the Government of India was in Indian hands.
- The Muslim League at first refused to join the Interim Government. But later, it changed its stand. Muslim League joined the Interim Government not to work sincerely.

Jinnah's Direct Action Resolution

- The set back in the election to the Constituent Assembly forced the league to reject the Cabinet Mission Plan. Jinnah gave the call for 'Direct Action' which postulated a campaign for the creation of Pakistan. Muslim League withdrew its acceptance of the Cabinet Plan on 29th July, 1946.
- From 16th August, 1946 the country witnessed communal riots on an unprecedented scale. The League passed a Direct Action Resolution which condemned both British Government and Congress (16th August, 1946). 27th March, 1947 was celebrated as Pakistan Day by Jinnah.

Constituent Assembly

The Constituent Assembly met in New Delhi on 9th December, 1946, without the participation of the league. Rajendra Prasad was elected as its President.

Mountbatten Plan (3rd June, 1947)

- The freedom with partition formula was coming to be widely accepted well before Mountbatten came. The important points of the plan were as follow
 - Punjab and Bengal Legislative Assemblies would meet in two groups: 1. Hindus and 2. Muslims to vote for partition.
 - In case of partition, two dominions and two Constituent Assemblies would be created.
 - Sindh would take its own decision.
 - The provision of referendum was provided in case of NWFP and Sylhet.
 - Referendum in NWFP and Sylhet, district of Bengal would decide the fate of these areas.
 - Freedom would come on 15th August, 1947.

The Partition of India

- A Boundary Commission would be set-up if partition was to be effected. On July 1947 the British Parliament ratified the Mountbatten Plan as the 'Independence of India' Act, 1947. The act was implemented on 15th August, 1947.
- Pakistan became independent on 14th August, 1947. MA Jinnah became the first Governor-General of Pakistan. At midnight of 15th August, 1947 as the clock struck 12, India became free. Nehru proclaimed it to be the nation with his famous 'tryst with destiny' speech.
- On the morning of 15th August, 1947, Lord Mountbatten was sworn-in as Governor-General and Jawaharlal Nehru as the first Prime Minister of free India.
- At the time of freedom, there were 562 small and big princely states. Sardar Patel, the first Home Minister used iron hand in this regard.
